1 CD PLUS 2 CM

I find it impossible to visit Los Angeles without visiting at least one of the many theme parks it has to offer. The first theme park on my list is the Magic Kingdom: Disneyland. The bright colors of Disneyland make me feel so happy to be there as I walk down main street. And I get super excited to ride the rides when I hear the laughter and happy screams of the people zooming along roller coasters.

1 CD PLUS 2 CM X3

I find it impossible to visit Los Angeles without visiting at least one of the many theme parks it has to offer. The first theme park on my list is the Magic Kingdom: Disneyland. The bright colors of Disneyland make me feel so happy to be there as I walk down main street. And I get super excited to ride the rides when I hear the laughter and happy screams of the people zooming along roller coasters. Another great park I'd love to visit is Universal Studios where the rides are all about thrills and chills. I can't wait to experience that feeling of being pressed into my chair by the g-forces. They also have some of my favorite Looney Toons characters walking around and I'd stop and get a picture with every one that I could find. The last theme park I'd be sure to spend a day at is Knott's Berry Farms, which is more old fashioned but still tons of fun. They have an old fashioned, wood roller coaster that creaks with every turn of the cart and makes the ride scarier. But mostly I'd be lured by the smell of their famous jams, fruity and sweet, which are best eaten over a funnel cake.

They have an old fashioned, wood roller coaster that creaks with every turn of the cart and makes the road scarier. But mostly I'd be lured by the smell of their famous jams, fruity and sweet, which are best eaten over a funnel cake. All three of these theme parks would make for a day filled with fun and laughter, but there are also some local attractions in the city that I want to visit!

RESTATE THREE MAIN POINTS.

Between the theme parks, the local attractions and having fun at the beach and ocean, Los Angeles would be an awesome trip.
